Ways To Decrease Gun Violence

- In my experience living in DC. I feel that mainly gun violence transpires from kids needing money. People owing people money or people fighting.
- I think we can decrease gun violence by creating jobs for the youth. Creating jobs for the youth will keep most kids who want things from turning to selling drugs. Jobs would also keep kids from robbing and car jacking.
- I think turning RFK stadium into a super learning complex is a great idea. I also think it would bring in kids from all over the city. which can have a effect on gun violence all over the city. If children and young adults between 8-21 had a place that was positive and could benefit them also educate them, along with put money in there pockets, and give them a feeling that they mattered and are cared about, It could change things greatly.
- Things the complex could have are job ready classes, big brother big sister type programs, kids sometimes don't have people to talk to about life problems. It could have clothing drives, sports, programs, arts and crafts and musical arts classes, dance and even acting classes.
- I would put together a team to distribute information about the learning complex. Even go as far as getting donations from the neighborhood and throwing summer cookouts and events and ask for donations to enter so money can be obtained for supplies.
- To create jobs for the youth we could hire clean up crews for the learning complex. We could hire youth to assist teacher in classrooms according to the kids skills and experience.
